

'So why are you so into Pinots?'

Hi, if you have enjoyed the movie 'Sideways' before you may recall a scene which has a wonderful description of Pinot Noir.

Maya: So why are you so into Pinots? They're like a thing with you.

Miles: "It's a hard grape to grow, as you know. It's thin-skinned, temperamental. It's not a survivor like Cabernet that can grow anywhere and thrive even when neglected. Pinot needs constant care and attention, you know? And in fact, it can only grow in these really specific, little, tucked away corners of the world. And, and only the most patient and nurturing of growers can do it, really. Only somebody who really takes the time... to understand Pinot's potential... can then coax it into its fullest expression."

Miles Raymond, from the movie "Sideways"

So, what is it about Pinot that makes it so magic - the versatility of the grape, its deep history and how strongly Pinot represents its terroir from the tip of your tongue to the tingling in your toes. In these Wine Club offerings we are celebrating Pinot Noir's heritage and where it has grown to today. The first is our Winemakers Selection, which showcases the Pinots and previews our new releases. The second, our International Selection, showcases Delamere wines against benchmark international wines. Your third choice is the 6 bottle Collectors Selection. Of course, you are always able to customise your own selection of 12 bottles for your Wine Club shipment.

International Selection

Quite often the terms old world and new world wines are referred to in media and within the wine industry. Often, we are asked what does this mean and where can we find them?

In this International Selection, we have put together wine to showcase the literal reference of Old World and New World as well as a few that indicate that there is much more to the story.

Old World wine typically refers to wines made in countries that are considered the birthplaces of winemaking, for example, France. Characteristically, 'old world' wines tend to be lighter-bodied, more complex, and lower in alcohol. So, in this pack we have included a 2014 Jean-Marc Bouley Pommard an 'old world' Burgundy from France. In comparison we have included the 2015 Delamere Pinot Noir. Although grown in the New World, our terroir, viticulture and vinification practices produce a style akin to Old World profiles.

New World wines are defined as coming from countries other than Europe. Generally speaking, the frequently warmer climates produce wines which are fuller bodied and have bolder fruit flavours. They also tend to be higher in alcohol. The Naissante Pinot Noir certainly meets this definition, but we also have included for you a 2014 Olivier Leflaive Bourgogne Rouge . Although an 'old world' wine, its palate is much more akin to 'new world' wine styles..

So, what should you prefer? That is entirely up to you. We would say that New World wines are stylistically wines best consumed in their youth when fresh and fruity. Old World wines are more suited to cellaring. After resting the bottle for a couple of years you will be rewarded with a balance of savoury complexity and velvet textures which leave you wanting more.

So, we hope you enjoy these wines, old and new.

We are really excited to release to you in this Collectors Selection the 2014 Block Pinot Noir and Chardonnay. The Block wines, having been harvested off the oldest parcels of Delamere's 6.5ha Vineyard, truly represent the elegance, complexity and magic that lies within our site. These 6 wines are presented to you in the exclusive Delamere wooden boxes and we would recommend cellaring for up to 20 years.
